

Puerto Rico San Juan

Ponce de Leon founded Puerto Rico in 1521. Its capital, San Juan, is the oldest city in this U.S. territory. More than a third of the island's citizens (1.6 million) reside in the city, which is also the heart of tourism to the country. The big attraction, of course, is the smooth, clean beaches, a wide range of accommodations, fabulous restaurants and Old San Juan, whose beautifully restored historic sights surrounded by the crashing turquoise surf are reason enough to make a trip, any time of the year, to Puerto Rico.

Along with Old San Juan, the most popular neighborhood is Condado, because of its excellent beachfront and boutiques. Ocean Park and Isla Verde as well as Santurce and its art galleries, are gaining popularity also, just broadening the appeal of San Juan to the many travelers who grace their shores each year.
